Introduction

The health of women, newborns, children, and adolescents is a cornerstone of national development and human capital growth. Globally, the Every Woman, Every Child (EWEC) Strategy 2016–2030 and the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) call for ending preventable maternal, newborn, and child deaths, with targets of reducing the global Maternal Mortality Ratio (MMR) to less than 70 per 100,000 live births and neonatal mortality to less than 12 per 1,000 live births by 2030. Complementary initiatives such as the Every Newborn Action Plan (ENAP) and other international commitments emphasize the importance of quality care and strong accountability systems in achieving these milestones.

“Uganda is shifting from counting deaths to using data, accountability and action to strengthen maternal, newborn and child health across the continuum of care, marking a new phase of health system transformation anchored in evidence, learning and continuous improvement.”

Why You Should Use Our Products?

Currently a combination of cotton and gauze are used to make postpartum pads for mothers after delivery.

However, during the making of these pads there is a high chance of transmitting infections to the mothers since there is no guarantee that the individual who has made the pad has followed the right procedure to disinfect their hands as per the Ministry of Health Infection control policies and procedures.

In addition, it can be very discomforting and painful while trying to remove pieces of cotton and gauze that get stuck to the incision.
